

After receiving some not official about just what it has not appeared in any official source. This

The Nagai Fleet

"Kreytaka, first seen landing troops on Kinooine, was designated the Longneck transport by the Alliance." This ship can be seen in both the sky in Star Wars #96: Duel with a Dark Lady and on the ground in

Star Wars #97: Escape

. The reason for it's Alliance nickname should be evident. To reiterate a point from the article, the is the Nagai's name for the vessel. The term Longneck transport is only an Alliance designation for it. And the theory is that no two vessels are exactly alike, so there should be no other transport of its kind.

Kreytaka

"...while the immense flagship Syalann was dubbed the Brute destroyer." This ship is intended to be the obviously large ship we only see the inside of in the opening and ending scenes of Star Wars #103: Tai

Written by Administrator

Sunday, December 27, 2009 - Last Updated Tuesday, December 29, 2009

---

. It's possible that one of the ships seen in

Star Wars

#96 and #97 is the

Syalann

, but that was left intentionally open for others to interpret. Note that since the article mentions Nagai ships are named for cities, there are (or maybe were ) also cities on Nagi named

Kreytaka

and

Syalann

.

"Others vessels included the Spider battleship and the Swoop cruiser." The Spider battleship -- named for its spider-like legs -- is seen in

Star Wars

#96. The Swoop cruiser is glimpsed outside the window of the

Syalann

on the first page of

Star Wars

#103. It coincidentally resembles one of the various swoops later seen in Star Wars sources, which in turn resemble certain real-world motorcycles. It would be fun to see if the authors of any future work could come up with some similar names based on the other starships seen on the comics page.

Star Wars Fanboy Association - Endnotes for The Forgotten War - Addendum

Written by Administrator

Sunday, December 27, 2009 - Last Updated Tuesday, December 29, 2009

---

The end of the Galactic Empire is a topic that has been discussed many times over the years. It is a topic that has been discussed many times over the years.

"The Forgotten War" is being discussed at the message boards at TheForce.net. Originally about an earlier Hyperspace piece, the thread turns to discussion of this article on page 11. Click here to head there and get involved in the discussion.